

Potta Trail Days celebrate the Métis culture

By Cory Pytlarz
Staff Writer

Potta Trail Days near Fishing Lake last weekend gave dozens an opportunity to enjoy the outdoors, tap their toes to some old-fashioned music and learn more about the Métis culture. The shoreline of Riel Beach campsite came alive Saturday and Sunday with the sounds of fiddle music, laughter and good times, and the event's top organizer says the plan is to have Potta Trail Days become an annual event.

"Researchers show there's a big demand for Aboriginal tourism

BACK TO THE OLD WAYS - Lane Scott had plenty of eager passengers for his horse-drawn Red River cart rides at Potta Trail Days this past weekend at Riel Beach.

WOODLAND TEA - Shirley Calliou brews up some wild mint tea to refresh Potta Trail Day visitors.

worldwide," says Potta Trail Days coordinator Gerald Tostowaryk, "and so we're starting small and we're going to work into the worldwide market."

Tostowaryk recalls the old story of an area woman named Potta who made so many visits to people in the Métis settlement area that she wore trails in the landscape. Herein is the history of the name of Potta Trail Days.

"They still used her trails for many years afterwards," Tostowaryk tells.

Other activities included Red River cart rides, fiddling and jigging, tasting wild mint tea at Shirley's cabin, cultural interpretation, arts and crafts, elder storytelling, and a Louis Riel dramatic musical.

"It's giving the people a sense of pride too in showing their culture to the world and their heritage," he says.

When all else failed, attendees were able to enjoy all the usuals a normal weekend on the lake could offer.

"It's not just the cultural part," Tostowaryk says. "They can relax, go to the beach and do some camping too."

Despite the humble beginnings of the first annual event, Tostowaryk says those who take part expressed positive feedback during the course of the weekend.

"People have come up to me and said, 'Hope it's bigger next year. I'm bringing the grandkids,'" he says.

Over and above the weekend's success, however, Tostowaryk has high hopes for Potta Trail Days and for the larger Métis tourism opportunity.

"Where else in the world can you get the culture of the Métis?" he says. "Nowhere."

"There's a First Nation culture, Aboriginal culture, all over the world, but the Métis culture is unique," he says. "And we have something, a niche, that we can build on here."

About 125 people took in Potta Trail Days last weekend, Tostowaryk estimates, and he is looking to build the weekend for next year.

"If we get double this year's crowd next year, I think we'll be happy."

Adele Johnson to headline Big Valley gospel concert

By Cory Pytlarz
Staff Writer

A local musician will be singing her melodies alongside such country stars as Paul Brandt, Martina McBride and Chris Cummings when the Big Valley Jamboree celebrates its 10th anniversary August 1 to 4 in Camrose.

St. Lina resident Adele Johnson will be performing Sunday morning (Aug. 4) at the jamboree as part of the Gospel music concert. While her performance won't be on the main stage shared by the big stars in prime time, Johnson says the invitation alone is an honour to receive.

"It's a little intimidating," Johnson says. "It is the biggest music festival in Canada."

"It's not as big as the main stage," Johnson says. "I don't have to worry about somebody like Martina McBride listening in. That's a good thing."

The daughter of Allen and Delphine Young of Lindbergh, the 35-year-old mother of four has been writing songs for about 16 years for other artists and her songs have been heard in Canada, the United States, Norway and Australia. She is just now starting her own performing career.

"I love it," she says. "Just knowing that my songs are being received in a positive light, that's a real big boost to my confidence."

"But if I can win an audience over, that's the most fun thing in the world."

After the release of her first album entitled Light of Love, Johnson was nominated in 1999 by the Alberta Recording Industry Association for Songwriter of the Year, Best New Artist, Best New Country Artist and Best New Gospel Artist. Despite home schooling her four children and the day-to-day duties on the farm, Johnson released her second album, Unconditionally, in August 2001.

"The music is more of a hobby and the fun thing that we get to do," Johnson says. "And now we get paid to do it so that's even more fun."

After a southern gospel quartet cancelled their act for the gospel portion of the jamboree, Johnson was invited and says this type of invitation "out of the blue" so early in her performing career is an excellent opportunity to make connections.

"It's kind of a low-key thing," she says. "You get 40,000 people walking by, which is really good exposure."

Johnson attended the concert last year with about 400 other spectators and says that she never expected to be up on that stage so soon.

"I was thinking maybe four or five years from now," she says, "I didn't expect this year."

Johnson and her band will be headlining the show with a 30-minute opening set and then closing out the concert with another 15-minute performance.

Johnson's currently nameless band is made up of husband Ralph Johnson (bass guitar), Keith Johnson (lead guitar), Guy Demers (drums), Claude Leblon (rhythm guitar) and Marion Tidsbury (harmony vocals). They perform both gospel and country music mimicking styles ranging from Patty Loveless to Trisha Yearwood, Johnson said. Whether leading a church service with her husband or performing various tunes including new country, old country or bluegrass, she says her band can strum it all.

"We're pretty flexible," she says. "Whatever there's call for we can usually work up a program for."

Following the big weekend in Camrose, Johnson and her band will be holding a benefit concert for former St. Lina resident Albert Loranger who needs expensive cancer treatment. The event will be held Aug. 9 at the St. Lina community hall.

community NEWS*Rae Croteau Jr. wins Klondike Days Chuckwagon Derby

Two third-generation chuckwagon drivers left their older competitors in the dust at the Klondike Days Chuckwagon Derby in Edmonton last week. Rae Croteau Jr. of Bonnyville won Thursday's Dash for Cash, coming across the line 1.1 seconds ahead of Kurt Bensmiller of Dewberry, and well ahead of Hugh Sinclair and Jerry Bremner.

The 20-year-old Croteau did not have an auspicious start to the show, coming in 22nd on his first trip around the track. However, the following night he posted the best time of the night, handing that honor over to Bensmiller on the third night while he came in second. Another second place on the fourth night brought him into the champion heat. Bensmiller, 19, took second overall on the first night of racing, but slipped to 12th the following night and was 13th on night four, the night three win assuring him a spot in the Dash for Cash. Both young teamsters started their wagon driving careers in 1999, and are following in the wheel-tracks of their fathers, outstanding veteran drivers Bert Croteau and Buddy Bensmiller, and grandfathers Ray Croteau Sr., Allan Bensmiller and Allen Smith, who are well remembered for their years of chuckwagon glory.

The World Professional Chuckwagons move onto the WPCA Dodge Pro Tour Championship Finals in Strathmore, August 1 - 5.

CPCA update

The last two weekends of Canadian Professional Chuckwagon Association action saw Larry McEwen take the honors at St. Walburg on July 20 and 21, with a 1.5 second lead over Wayne Knight. Luke Tournier was third and Layne McGillivray fourth in the meet.

This past weekend at Meadow Lake was Wayne Knight's turn in the winner's circle, with Ross Knight second, Vern Nolin third and Leo Tournier fourth. Doug Irvine collected second and third day money on Sunday, with times of 1:04.52 and 1:04.57, just behind Ross Knight's 1:03.84.

The top 10 after St. Walburg are, from first to 10th: Brian Laboucane, Larry McEwen, Wayne Knight, Layne McGillivray, Jim Knight, Leo Tournier, Vern Nolin, Ross Knight, Luke Tournier and Rod Salmond. Doug Irvine is in 15th spot and Bert Croteau 17th.

The CPCA wagons race tonight through Thursday at Regina Buffalo Days.

Speaking of health care

deanna
EASTHOPE
from the FCSS desk

What is happening with our health care? To answer that question we go to what we know for sure. We know there are three committees of the government who are working very hard in exploring the recommendation made by the Mazankowski Report. To put it simply, one committee is looking at funding, another committee is looking at new ways of health delivery and another committee is looking at all things on the horizon with health care. These committees are exploring the main recommendations of the Mazankowski Report which focused on: 1) patients are first, 2) improve access to care, 3) give tools, 4) look at new models of care and 5) bring down the shackles and work together. In other words, the committees are looking at ways to deal with health care now as well as in the future. And ... this process of "being in the discussion stage" will probably take most of the summer. Then there will be some time before they sit down and write the policies of how all of this will take place. So everyone, we are looking at September before we hear anything definite around health care decisions.

Meanwhile, in regard to our local situation, and the Lakeland Regional Health Authority, what is happening? Well, we do know that a deficit budget was presented to the Alberta Health and Wellness Minister, Gary Mar. It is the policy of the Minister that a deficit budget not be accepted unless the RHA can show how they are going to eliminate the deficit within three years. Unfortunately, the LRHA were not able to satisfactorily demonstrate how they were going to accomplish this task. (We know the LRHA did not want to make any more cuts, and they were asking for more money). Anyway, after three attempts to request a new budget, it was obvious that the LRHA and the Minister were locked as to a budget solution. Therefore, the government action as announced the first part of July, took place. A consultant has been assigned to the LRHA to look into the whole budget situation. So watch for announcements on what will be happening with the LRHA.

What about health care in the future? Did you know that in 1978 the World Health Organization (a United Nations committee), developed a definition for "Primary Health Care". Thus ever since that date, primary health care has been a matter of discussion as the possible health care solution for the future. And, yes you guessed it, the Alberta Government is well positioned for primary health care reform. The background for this occurred with a number of province-wide consultations, from the Rainbow Report to the Health Roundtables in the early 1990s and the Health Summit (1999), where they consistently emphasized the need to move forward with primary health care. What is Primary Health Care? Primary Health Care is considered broadly as the first level of contact for individuals with the health system — that is, where health services are mobilized and coordinated to promote health, prevent illness, care for common illness and manage ongoing problems (National Forum on Health, 1997). To put this into practice, an enhanced teamwork of multidisciplinary individuals would be available from a central location and they would be available for health care inquiries. It is being suggested that a nurse practitioner could be the first person to answer the phone. So do you all see what I see? Health Care as we now know, it will not be the same in the future. When will all this happen? Well, what we know for sure is that it is under discussion at this time throughout the Province of Alberta.

Floor curlers win gold at Zone 7 Senior Games

Seven Elk Point and district competitors brought home medals from the 2002 Zone 7 Senior Games in Bonnyville on July 18 and 19.

Just under 400 seniors took part in the Games, where Premier Ralph Klein took part in the opening ceremonies.

Elk Point Floor Curlers Bernice Bykowski, Anita Ballas, Violet Miller and Helga Vaughan brought home gold in the Team 50+ division, a surprise for the ladies who "just picked up a team and went to play," according to Mrs. Ballas. "We never expected to do this well."

Three men also brought home medals from the Seniors Games.

Roland Gascon earned silver in the Golf, Men's 50+ Callaway, while Ernie Poitras received Bronze in the Golf, Men's 50+ Low Gross.

In the Bowling, Del Smith brought home Bronze in the Men's 50+ Pins Over Average.

Clandonald competitors also earned medals in the Games. In Golf, Ladies 70+ Callaway, Mildred Molineux received Silver, while in Golf, Men's 70+ Low Gross, Frank Molineux also brought home Silver.

The Military Whist team of Dora Feenstra, Marge Osinchuk, Elsie Quickstad and Emma Osinchuk received Silver as well.

Congratulations, everyone!

Training horses the gentle way

Tom Durocher is Fishing Lake's own horse whisperer

By Cory Pytlarz
Staff Writer

Horse whisperer Tom Durocher treated audiences at Potta Trail Days to a gentle showcase of how to begin training horses.

In five performances of the Silent Language of a Horse last weekend, Durocher demonstrated the initial steps he uses to train horses without the use of violence.

"You got to love them, understand them," he says. "They're no different than we are."

Prior to learning the language of horses, Durocher worked with horses as ferrier for 18 years. He is now in his second year of horse whispering and says he does it to help promote love, understanding and respect for the animals.

"The traditional way of breaking horses is by beating them to submission," he says. "So I want to take the violence out of the scenario."

He no longer breaks horses, but trains them, Durocher says.

"I've seen good horses and I've seen bad horses," he says. "Once I understood horses, there never was a bad horse."

Potta Trail Days was Durocher's first public horse whispering demonstration. His work in horse whispering is just getting started, however.

"My goal in life is to keep on training, keep going, going back to school every chance I get and work my way towards becoming an instructor," Durocher says.

There is currently only one horse whisperer instructor in Canada who uses the same technique, Durocher says.

"I'd like to be the first in Alberta," he says. "This technique is very new to Canada."

community NEWS*Nutrition Notes - From wallet savings to waistline woesBy Linda Fox, RD
Elk Point Health Centre

North Americans who take advantage of larger sizes for just a few pennies more when eating out may be getting more calories than they bargain for, according to a new report by a coalition of health organizations. The report found that the food industry's "value marketing" encourages overeating and contributes to the skyrocketing rates of obesity in adults and children.

"Americans are constantly induced to spend a little more money to get a lot more food," said Margo Wootan, director of nutrition policy and the Centre for Science in the Public Interest (CSPI). "Getting more for your money is ingrained in the American psyche. But bigger is rarely better when it comes to food."

"From Wallet to Waistline: The Hidden Costs of Super Sizing" was issued by the (US) National Alliance for Nutrition and Activity (NANA), a coalition of over 225 national, state and local health organizations. The report compares the price, calories, and saturated fat in differently sized foods from fast-food chains, convenience stores, coffee shops and movie theatres. Among the findings:

■ Upgrading from a 3-ounce mini cinnamon bun to a normal size cinnamon bun costs only 24% more, yet delivers 123% more calories. The larger size also provides almost 3/4 of a days worth of artery-clogging saturated fat.

■ Switching from a popular convenience store's regular size soft drink to a double size costs 42% more, but provides 300% more calories. Those 37 extra cents deliver 450 extra calories - more than you'd get in a quarter pound hamburger.

■ It costs 8 cents more to purchase a quarter pound burger with cheese, small French fries and small Coke (890 calories) separately at a popular fast food chain than to buy the trio in a large extra value meal, which comes with a large fries and large Coke (1380 calories).

■ Moving from a small to a medium bag of movie theatre popcorn costs about 71 cents - and 500 calories. A 23% increase in price provides 125% more calories and two days' worth of saturated fat (And that's unbuttered popcorn!)

According to the report, the practice of "bundling" - turning a fast-food sandwich into a "value meal" by adding sides like fries and a soft drink - is responsible for some of the largest increases in calorie content. And fountain drinks proved to be especially bad health bargains. They cost the least to upgrade and deliver the biggest calorie boots (and provide some of the highest profit margins for retailers).

"These pricing practices make a compelling case for requiring fast-food and other chain restaurants to disclose calories right on their menus," Wootan said. "To make informed choices, consumers need to know the cost to their wallet - and their waistline."

"So what can consumers do right now?" according to Melanie Polk, RD, director of nutrition education at the American Institute for Cancer Research, "We can speak up. Say 'small,' say 'half,' and share."

By speaking out, Polk said, consumers let the food marketer know that they want healthy meals. "Order a small or half-size. Share that bucket of fries or bladder-bursting drink with friends. Keeping those extra cents in your wallet means keeping extra pounds off your body, and that's more important than ever."

Obesity rates in adults rose by 60% between 1990 and 2000 alone, while childhood obesity rates doubled over the last 20 years. Obesity causes an estimated 300,000 premature deaths each year, second only to smoking as the nation's largest cause of preventable death. Type 2 diabetes can no longer be called "adult Onset" diabetes because it now occurs so frequently in children.

"If you walked into a fast food restaurant in the 1950s and ordered a burger, fries and a 12 once Coke, you'd have bought a meal with about 590 calories," said Carol Tucker Foreman, Consumer Federation of America. "Today a super-sized meal may contain 1000 calories more. As a result, we're super-sizing our kids and super-sizing ourselves."

That's why consumers should decline to take advantage of "more-for-less" marketing practices, even if it may seem cost-ineffective, says Polk. "It's penny-wise and pound-foolish to order more food than you really want, just because it seems like a bargain," she says. "Let restaurateurs and retailers know that you want reasonable portions at reasonable prices. After all, restaurants pride themselves on responding to customer demand."

CRIME STOPPERS

■ Between 12:15 pm and 3:30 pm on 2002-07-08 the rear driver's side wheel well of a maroon PT Cruiser parked in front of Home Hardware in Elk Point was damaged. It appears as though the damage was made by a taller vehicle with a black plastic bumper that was attempting to parallel park behind the Cruiser.

■ RCMP Elk Point has received a complaint of a theft of two eight foot blue steel gates, a CD player and a Coleman generator from a Grazing Lease southeast of Frog Lake. The theft occurred between the 15th and the 20th of June.

Investigation to date has not produced any suspects, but information has surfaced that someone in the Fishing Lake area has been attempting to sell gates. These may or may not be related to the stolen property.

Anyone found in possession of any stolen property may face charges under the Criminal Code, regardless if they are the person who actually committed the theft. If you know who may be responsible please contact the Elk Point RCMP at (780) 724-3964 or your nearest police agency.

Anyone with information is asked to call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS (8477) or the Elk Point RCMP Detachment at (780) 724-3964.

what's NEWS at the LIBRARY?

Water fun for Sail the 7 Seas participants

By Carlen Mutch
Summer Reading Program Coordinator

Last week was water days here at the library and it was perfect weather for it. But considering the weather this summer any day would have been fine.

On Tuesday I had a pretty good-sized group with the younger kids. I had planned a couple games with them but I think that the concept of standing in line and taking turns in line was a little over their heads. So we tried to play the games but mostly it was just the kids doing whatever they wanted. We then played tag with the water and went on to paint the windows. Everyone got nice and soaked (luckily I stayed dry).

Unfortunately, that was not the case with the older kids on Thursday. I only had about 8 kids, so it was a small group, but we used about 20 times more water. All the kids brought their water guns (some which were bigger than they were) and sprayed each other. I too was the victim of many hits as well as a couple of buckets of water dumped on me. Luckily I was in control of the hose so I tried to keep the kids at a distance with the water pressure. That usually didn't work. We then painted the windows too. The kids asked me for some black paint which I readily provided. They then proceeded to smear that black paint all over their bodies and run around. Yes, fun times at the reading program. I managed to get most of them washed up before their parents got there as I figured they probably wouldn't appreciate a child coming home completely black. It was definitely fun though.

I said last week that I'd brief everyone on the storyteller this week. Her name is Denise Miller and she comes from Sherwood Park. She has been a storyteller for fifteen years and is president of T.A.L.E.S. Strathcona and a member of the Storyteller of Canada. Denise is a multi-talented performer and also does skill building and professional development workshops. I can't wait to see what she has in store for us and I hope to see lots of people come out. She is coming on August 9 at 11 am. This is open to everyone in the community and should be loads of fun.

Summer survival strategies for children and drivers

Alberta Motor Association
Review Contributors

What is the number one threat to the health of Alberta's children?

It's not food poisoning. Nor is it communicable diseases, or even water mishaps - it is traffic trauma. In other words, your child is more likely to be a victim of a traffic collision this summer than of any form of disease or summertime activity.

That's why the AMA School Safety Patrol - on the job for 65 years - offers the following summer survival strategies for parents and children:

- Play in safe areas. Don't play on the road or near traffic.
- Cross where there are crosswalks, not diagonally or between parked cars.
- Look in all directions before crossing the street and check over your shoulder for vehicles that may be turning.

■ When you see a gap in traffic, use Point, Pause and Proceed. That is:

Point your arm in front of you to indicate that you would like to cross the street;

Pause to ensure that it is safe. Make eye contact with motorists before crossing the street - don't assume they will see you; and Proceed while keeping your arm pointed in front of you as you walk. Keep scanning for traffic in all directions. A painted crosswalk doesn't protect you!

Summer Survival Strategies for Drivers

- Slow down, especially in residential, playground, park or campground areas.
- Scan between and under parked vehicles and in other danger zones where children are hard to see.
- Make eye contact with children to ensure that they know you see them.
- Avoid distractions while driving. A split second of inattention can have tragic consequences.

■ Be especially careful when backing out of a parking stall or driveway.

■ Never pass a vehicle that has stopped for a pedestrian. If you are the first to stop for pedestrians, stop far enough back to allow other drivers to have a clear view of the crosswalk.

While school safety patrollers and students throughout the province have begun their summer vacation, the need for safety never takes a break. Have a great summer - but keep these safety tips in mind.

Smart shopping leaves you slimmer

By Carol Moro
Take Off Pounds Sensibly

Want to get the most for your money at the grocery store while loading up on foods that taste good and are good for you? Consider these hints.

1. Plan ahead. Buy enough for a full week. If you cut down your trips to the grocery store, you also reduce your chances of splurging on impulse items.

2. Make vegetables and grains the focus of the meal. Consider meat or cheese as side dishes. Stir-frying makes a little meat go a long way.

3. Figure snacks into your plan, too. If you don't, your family will snack on foods you'd planned for meals. 4. Make a shopping list, and stick to it.

5. Don't be taken in by all specials. Ask yourself whether you'd buy this food even if it weren't on sale. And, if the food comes only in large quantities, can you use or freeze all of it before it goes bad?

6. Leave children, friends or spouses at home if they tend to put high-calorie foods in the cart. Or use this time to teach them about shopping for nutritious foods.

PHYSICIAN OPENING

The Area of the Tofield Health Centre is looking for Physicians to replace the vacancy of a long term resident Doctor that is retiring. The area is experiencing a constant growth pattern and is a modern community that is only 45 minutes to the heart of Edmonton.

Tofield's Demographic position and modern Health Centre, make it a very desirable place to live and practice medicine.

This is a terrific opportunity for dedicated Doctors to take over a very well established practice and to expand if desired.

Please contact the Town of Tofield Administrator Cindy Neufeld for more information.
